As an illustration program, Photoshop is also designed for the design professionals rather than the novice. Figure 6-7 shows a Photoshop document after initial processing. Figure 6-7: The first layer created for the image. Flashing by the numbers Photoshop's first menu item, the menu bar, is simple and easy to understand. You may find yourself coming back to it as your Photoshop journey continues. Although you can perform many of the actions on a document after the initial setting of the document through the menu bar, you need to begin doing so when you first open an image. Here are some of the important menu items: Dictate: This option controls the amount of automation involved when you perform an action with Photoshop. Do you want your image to automatically save or publish after you perform a task? You can select on or off depending on your preference. In addition to saving, you can also select options for resizing or sharpening images. This option takes effect only if you've previously set the Export Setting to Save or Export. File: Here you select whether you want to share or view a file. You can preview multiple file formats by selecting the File Format option. The menu contains your program's comprehensive list of supported file formats. Help: Photoshop's Help feature includes a quick help file for many actions. To open the help file, simply click the tiny triangle at the bottom-left of the menu bar. You can also find additional help files through the Help menu. Open: Here you can open a file, grab a picture, or open a link, all from your computer. This works by scanning your computer's files for a specific file. Preferences: This option opens the Settings dialog box. You can select from the menu lists of options or the help page. Redo: Photoshop has a built-in command-Z feature. This means you can undo multiple action steps. This command is found on the Edit menu. The Rec option opens the redo/undo dialog box. Save: You can save your file as a JPEG, BMP, GIF, TIFF, or PSD file. It also includes a page-saving feature for printing. Share: You can share Photoshop files through the Internet or even through a program on a web server. You can also share through a floppy disk or even a memory card. Undo: There are various ways to undo an action

Yaya Sanogo to Chelsea will take place in January The teenager will leave on a season-long loan deal with the Blues after impressing in a series of impressive displays for Arsene Wenger's side this season. Wenger believes that the Frenchman is the perfect addition for a squad riddled with injuries, and he has signed a new long-term contract with the club until 2019. Sanogo impressed in the recent victory over Norwich City, scoring in the 6-2 win. "We are really pleased because the transfer is done and we will see in the January transfer window how we can do," he said. "We will see. "I am really excited for January. I know I have the potential I have to play in this type of situation. "I have not scored in a few matches since I started for the first team at the Emirates, for Arsenal. It has been a long time. I have to look at that to try and improve. "To get back to a level that I was at last season, I have to play 90 minutes for Arsenal. If I want to play for the national team, to be a regular in the national team, I have to be the regular in the first team."Lamborghini has extended its partnership with Biotrax Life Sciences, a leading British biotech company headquartered in Cambridge that develops probiotics for the nutritional health of animals, with a view to developing a strain of pigs with a superior ability to digest dietary fibre and to gain weight. The two companies have formed a strategic alliance that will see Biotrax Life Sciences develop a new proprietary strain of piglet probiotics in partnership with Lamborghini. The probiotics, to be named Biotrax Pig Pro, will be developed and registered as a feed additive for use in pig production. The collaboration will make both companies 'green' and join the movement towards making agriculture more sustainable. Developing the new probiotic strain will take place at Lamborghini's Research and Development Centre in Sant'Agata Bolognese. Once a unique partnership has been established between the companies and the new strain is developed, Biotrax Life Sciences and Lamborghini will work together to market the new product in the UK and internationally. More information about this project is available to the general public at www.lamborghini.com/green/biotrax. Source: Lamborghini
